It was developed by Corel and is the predecessor to Adobe Illustrator, which is a paid program. PSP allows you to create complex vector graphics with tools that allow you to change the colors, shapes, and even sizes of items on the page. However, the true power of PSP is the ability to add overlays and masks to your images. You can use these tools to layer and merge images as well as use the new gradients and texture brushes to make your page truly unique.

Q: Parse RSS, print only the main content I'm currently trying to parse and print the main content out of an RSS feed in PHP, but I'm having a problem. I tried to split the first line of the rss feed into an array, then split the title and the first line of the description into a array, but I'm having trouble with the description because the description contains a link to an image, so it won't be a string but an array with length 3. The source is and I just want to print out the first line of the main content of the description. I have already tried xpath, but I am not experienced enough with it to extract the first line. So I am open for all suggestions. A: You can parse with the DOM, and then you have to find the contents of each node. It's very simple. `$dom = new DOMDocument; $dom->load(""); $xpath = new DOMXPath($dom); $nodes = $xpath->query('//channel/item[1]//description[1]'); foreach($nodes as $description) { echo $description->nodeValue; }` That said, this isn't really a problem with the description, but rather, the nature of how rss works. I'm not sure exactly what you're trying to accomplish, but I assume you want to parse the rss feed so you can pull out some data? I don't know why you would, but if that's what you were doing, you can use something like simplexml and get the data that way. It's a bit more obscure, but it's easy once you get the hang of it. Q: How to get only one value from JSON response in php I need to get only one value from this JSON response, how to achieve this.

Risk of primary biliary cirrhosis in a large cohort of patients with chronic viral hepatitis C receiving interferon therapy: relationships with hepatitis B e antigen status and alanine aminotransferase values. We evaluated the risk of primary biliary cirrhosis (PBC) in 211,691 chronic hepatitis C virus (HCV) seropositive patients (HCV-C) treated with interferon (IFN-alpha) for a total of 2,461,021.25 patient-years of follow-up. The cumulative incidence of PBC was significantly greater in women with HCV-C than in the corresponding HCV-C men (4.4% in women vs. 2.8% in men; P = 0.001; Relative risk, RR = 1.49; 95% confidence interval, CI = 1.07-2.06). Women with HCV-C carrying HBeAg presented with a significantly greater risk of PBC than men carrying HBeAg (P = 0.007; RR = 1.75; CI = 1.08-2.84). In contrast, women with HCV-C carrying HBeAg, with normal alanine aminotransferase (ALT) values, had a significantly lower risk of PBC than HBeAg-negative women (P = 0.006; RR = 0.44; CI = 0.22-0.91). Women with genotypes of HCV-C other than 2 or 3 (1a/3a) had a risk of PBC that was significantly greater than that in men with genotypes of HCV-C other than 2 or 3 (1a/3a) (P = 0.01; RR = 1.44; CI = 1.05-1.99). On the basis of these findings, our data suggest that, in women, the risk of PBC is not substantially reduced by the presence of HBeAg and that a protective effect can be exerted by the presence of HBeAg in women with normal ALT values.
