I've been selling my app on the Google Play for years in countries that are not China, such as Italy or Spain. To do so, I have added the "Chinese territories" to my Application settings, following the instructions on Google's support page. How can I do that in China? A: To Market your app in China, you need to go through the Google Play Developer Console settings to add the Chinese territory. If you use the free version of the play store then the registration process is free and you just need to have your app published and available in the respective countries. If you use the Play edition of your app, you need to submit your app in the Google Play for Education that is free. Once you've done that then you can have your app listed in Chinese or English on the Play Store. I have a page with two text boxes and a dropdown list. If I type into the first text box and click on the dropdown list, the second text box gets updated. My question is, how do I get PHP to see that the second text box has been changed? I know it can be done using JS (with a function I wrote), but is there any way that I can make the PHP refresh my view with the new information once the second text box is updated? Thanks in advance! to use PHP 5.3, you can use the `$_SESSION`, which is a persistent key/value storage mechanism. `$_SESSION` values can be used programmatically. For example: `session_start(); $_SESSION['foo'] = 1; $_SESSION['bar'] = 1;` It's also possible to access this same mechanism with JavaScript, using the `sessionStorage` and `localStorage` features. For example: `sessionStorage.setItem('foo', 'bar');`
