ABOUT ELDEN RING STORY A young knight, the Tarnished, who lost everything due to a misunderstanding, wakes up on the verge of death. After he is rescued by a forest elf named Grace, she guides him to the Lands Between, where a powerful ring called the Elden Ring is hidden deep in the ground. Q: Exporting to Excel from MySQL What would be the best way to export (numerical and character data) from a MySQL database into a tab delimited Excel spreadsheet?

Any suggestions are appreciated. A: You could write a program that connects to the database, queries the database to get the data and writes the data to an Excel spread sheet (the program should be the one that reads from the database in the first place of course). This is something that could be done by writing some python script with PyExcellerator. For instance, PyExcellerator provides a module to export queries and results to tab delimited excel files. Here is an example: `import pyexcellerator data_results = pyexcellerator.connect(...) data_query_result = pyexcellerator.query(...) filename = "excel_file.xlsx" pyexcellerator.writer(..., filename=filename) pyexcellerator.writer(data_results, filename=filename)`

`pyexcellerator.writer(data_query_result, filename=filename) pyexcellerator.close()` Update: You can find a good explanation of Excel export with Python here.

Q: Python counts numbers from different files I have a complex system of folders and files that contains:

- a main.py
- my other files
- a folder called 'sources' that has
 - a subfolder called 'a' that has
 - a.txt file that looks like this: 123456 BamKlnBamKln AEGeNTYYTAGEAG GBiHDXDPEHJZG 7FGffGfcGfGfo FODSIFODSIf0

- 6CGRifCGRiffo 7VU9VDVU9vdv 3K7JK7JK7jo

I need to count how many times a number from the main.py file appears in the.txt files in the sources directory. The file list from sources is this: . |-- a | `-- file1 | |-- numbers.txt | |-- numbers.txt |-- file2 | |-- numbers.txt |
