I was eight years old and my mother had won a couple of nights in a London jail by packing my bags in a brown paper bag and emptying it into the back of her car. It was Christmas break and she had gone to the jail to give her brother some Christmas cheer. I had no idea why she was going there or where she was taking me. All I knew was that I couldn't wait to play a game of Boggle - it was about the only thing I knew how to play at that age - with the world's nicest children. We arrived at the prison and I was ushered in to meet a bailiff. I was wearing a little white shirt, denim shorts, denim pants and white socks. I didn't mind as I had on slippers and my toes were buried in the top of the pants. My mother followed behind and looked very happy and excited, her eyes were glued to the sky. The bailiff very kindly came over and shook my mother's hand and said: "Hi, I'm sorry to have to bring you in like this, but I've received some information that the son of an old friend of mine needs to see him." My mother's mouth fell open and she was speechless for a full 15 seconds. It was a look of total shock and disbelief. "Now, this is a family friend of yours?" asked the bailiff "He just called," she finally managed to say. The bailiff then explained to my mother that the old friend's son, whose name she didn't know at the time, was currently in prison for a crime he hadn't committed. My
